Many new homes boast all the bells and whistles you could wish for, but no 'heart'. That mysterious emotional element that makes a house a home. This breathtaking home has been built by a renowned local builder (Homes by Chapman), for his own family. This means it is built to premium standards, but is also full of warmth, character and unique touches.

Weaving past a landscaped pebbly creek bed, the entrance is ideal for those who work from home. Clients can enter into the spacious office and the swish adjoining powder room without encroaching on family privacy. The main living space is a masterpiece in effortless internal and external living with elements of new and old meshing together to create interest and space. Walls of glass overlooking the shimmering pool and a rustic exposed brick wall (recycled from a farm in Winchelsea) immediately impress. Cooking badly is nigh on impossible in the phenomenal kitchen which is decked out with Smeg steam and pyroletic ovens, wine-fridge, fully integrated Liebherr fridge/freezer, Caesarstone benches and a lovely recycled timber work bench.
